

Cultivating Safety with Clients

Use Deb Dana's three Cs of safety as trustworthy guides before starting your clients on their Safe and Sound Protocol (SSP) journey.

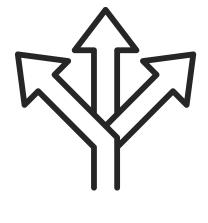

CONTEXT

- Anticipate and allow ample time for questions
- Normalize and provide context for dysregulation that may briefly accompany SSP delivery

CHOICE

- Offer a choice between the SSP playlists
- Give a client the choice of what activities to do before, during and after a listening session

 Ask caregivers their communication preferences post-listening (form, email, insession)

CONNECTION

 Create rapport through email before meeting

Use invitational, non-

- directive language
- themselves by exploring and celebrating their strengths and noticing their physical sensations as important messages from their bodies
- In an SSP remote group listening setting, invite attendees to co-create safety for each other by having their materials ready, choosing a private space to limit background distractions, and being mindful of what they share with the group
